THE STAR ROUTE RODDERIES. In the yeary interesting and able report of the postmester general, lately published, my many other useful articles, we find the following:

A minute investigation into alleged abuses in the star coals service was instituted by direction of the late coals service was instituted by direction of the late peaks and is still being prosecuted. The passumes department in still being prosecuted. The passumes department has co-operate, and will continue its co-operate, with the department of justice in this investigation. No one who has not been directly managed in the matter can fully appreced the sagnification of the moderation, the mass of record co-disease ensumered the difficulty of a personal investigation is sparsely settled territories, and the results attained by the patient and intelligent labors of the newligators of this department. There are by no doubt from the facts already accurating, that the enfaiting elatities leave the way open to great absence, and there is abundant ground for saking a judicial in resultanting local control of the last two years.

It will he need from the above that the postmaster holds it to be the necessary duty of the government theires the prosecution of those. france. Many imagine that the ignormal our defeat that the government has not with in the courie, on account of the mismanagement of the cases by the late attorney general, has indedultely supposed of the matter and that the prosecution will not be resumed. The tone of this repor would seem to give a different liles. The government, in its first dash at the criminals, was hasepered by the want of unity in its; departmental force and by the fact that the administration was going through a transition state, suring which no telling vigor could be expected in the quasi representatives of govramsat. There is no reason to believe that a McCoy, Cheapest Printer, First and Stark. salutary end may not jet be reached, if the animus of the government is plainly to employ every egal method to bring to justice these shame ess swindlers. The postmaster general very correctly points out the looseness of the STOP SACR FICING LIF? statutes under which these rescully operations have been parried one Pilo imperfect state of the law may clear the thieves in spite of every Specia legitimate effort; but certainly the government should not unloose the grip it has on them until every legal resource be exhausted and the people be assured that the fault lies in the law and not in the administration, that the most deliberate and exact piece of rescality the country has every witnessed shall escape condign punishment. The declaration of the postmaster general has also a cautionary weight. It is uncumbent on congress to take this matter under advisement and make such changes and ampedments to the existing statntes as shall make the successful perpetration of such acts of villainy extremely difficult, if

General Butler recently received a letter inquiring if it was true that he had spoken disparagingly of the Jews in a case before the United States circuit our!. He replied in the following letter:

Now, I was speaking of a figm of the million Jews, who, while admitting that my client had been robbed by their firm, the New York Novelty Com-party, out of many thousand dollars by pirating her patent, which has been established by the court. patent, which has been established by the court, yet were endeavoring to essage leability for the strong by proving that the firm, consisting of the strong by proving that the firm, consisting of the brothers Schwab only, had been changed from time to time from one to smother, so that they claimed that they had escaped liability. When he brought it homeshes at he was horsel and mean because it turned out to be on "Ancient Methods of Filtration." The notion of copyright run mad culminates in Germany, where a recent number of a magazine seriously advocates, as an addition to the law of literary property, the proposition that the purchaser of a book shall be prohibited from lending it without the express sanction of the author, to be obtained only on payment of high royalty. John Hickman took the job of tearing down the old-county jail at listic Greek, Michigan. The work cost h.m. 55, and he got firewood enough for a life-time out of it, sold 60,000 brick and found two $100 bills in a crack in the wall—placed there by some thief to all probability. A large number of files and saws were also found secreted in cracks and he es.

The humors of the New York Yorktown ball we fear will nover be fully recorded. But one delightful incident must be resented from oblivious and emblaned in these columns. An accomplished and linguistic committeeman, acteived by Governor Cornell as a sort of walking Ollendorff, introduced one of the French guests to an American officer as "un grand-file de Lafsystic.": "Pardon," said the gallant man, equally impressed with reverence for the lasguage of his native land, "un netter is de the memory or this ancestor and with respect for the language of his native land, "un petit-i is the Lafay-tite." The most charming part of this inci-dent was that the unperturbed committeeman ac-cepted this gentle correction as being an illustration merely of the modesty of the descendant of Lafa-yelle, and so related it to a circle of admiring friends
